

Ever since my childhood, I have had this vision of a blurred veil of rain as I emerge from sleep to waking. I can see it in three stages - the first as fine diagonal rain, the second as a fast moving stream, and the last as vertically moving droplets as if evaporating.

The sleep/wake condition means that I experienced the underlying 'ordered reality' (of my bedroom) at the same time as a blurred veiled vision of rain, as I emerge from my sleep.

The drawing and models try to bring the two conditions together with the underlying order being distorted/disturbed by the blurred overlay. The diagonal, horizontal and vertical movement from my sleep/wake vision has been incorporated into my concept drawing and models.

I chose transparent materials to work with to represent the 'blurred rain veil'. The projection of the light in the models develops this pursuit of the 'blurred rain veil'.

While the final model projects a rather subtle shadow, it completes the atmosphere and feeling of calmness and serenity that I feel when visioning this 'blurred rain veil'.
